Can anyone, ideally someone anti-GG, explain to me what the anti-GGers think a victory for them will look like?
submitted 16 hours ago by dizzy_j
I tried to engage with /r/gamerghazi but got banned before even expressing a pro-GG opinion. I just cannot work out what it is they are expecting to achieve by opposing a campaign aimed at countering corruption and unethical behaviour among gaming journalists. Given that it is hard to find a reasonable anti-GGer with which to discuss this, I am forced to come here and ask.
Can anyone help?

They have tried to impersonate me on Twitter. Even as we speak, they are spreading lies to journalists via burner e-mail accounts in an attempt to destroy me professionally.

Boo-freaking-hoo. Even if we assume those "death threats" are genuine, Wu destroyed himself professionally when he lined up with the pinkshirts in the media against the gamer community. No serious gamer will ever play one of his games, no matter how many ideological sympathetic game journalists write favorably about it.

usually the #gamergate line is "not saying she deserved it, but she deserved it." here, it's just "she deserved it."

> "She made a social comment, then got death threats. How can none of you feel at least the slightest bit of empathy for this?"
> She insulted and belittled an entire section of the populace, and didn't expect for there to be any repercussions? There's a word for that, fucktarded.
> And the supposed death threats? I'm not buying it. That is quickly becoming the Left's new "almost raped". Claim you feel threatened and BOOM your opponents are silenced. Except for the fact everyone else is catching on to this new excuse for what it is, utter bullshit.

As to having empathy for any Leftist SJW, I'd sooner feel empathy for the careers and lives they ruin in their ham-fisted attempts to shut down the opposition.

Critically, you can knock a person off of it and replace them interchangeably. The pedestal remains the same; it's not about the person.

And activists often accept the Faustian bargain in the name of raising awareness and publicising clear examples of inequality.

5 4

Part of the problem is structural. In the media, often as not, "if it bleeds it leads." Which means, for us, in order to lead we must bleed.

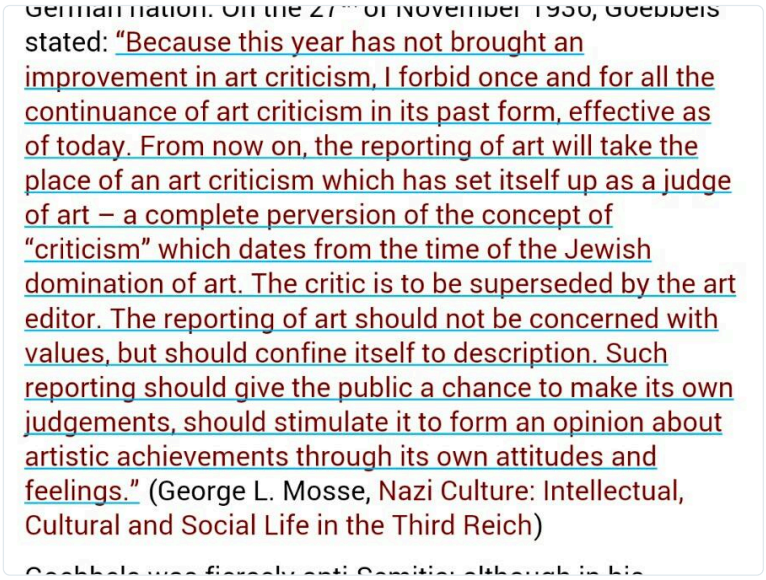
does this sound familiar, #gamergate? that's goebbels on art criticism GOEBBELS do you see the problem here?



German nation. On the 27th of November 1936, Goebbels stated: "Because this year has not brought an improvement in art criticism, I forbid once and for all the continuance of art criticism in its past form, effective as of today. From now on, the reporting of art will take the place of an art criticism which has set itself up as a judge of art – a complete perversion of the concept of "criticism" which dates from the time of the Jewish domination of art. The critic is to be superseded by the art editor. The reporting of art should not be concerned with values, but should confine itself to description. Such reporting should give the public a chance to make its own judgements, should stimulate it to form an opinion about artistic achievements through its own attitudes and feelings." (George L. Mosse, Nazi Culture: Intellectual, Cultural and Social Life in the Third Reich)

The goals of the movement should be
1.To see Gawker shut down permanently and any site containing it's ilk shutdown.
2.To ensure Politics are kept out of reviews permanently, any and all reviews on video games should be unbiased as possible. When you force bias like a form of politics or that your a feminist and this doesn't hold up to feminist ideas or that it has no trannies or it depicts trannies in a bad light, these kinds of reviews are not welcomed and unwanted! I just wanna know about the gameplay, story, and entertainment value. These 3 specifically what I wanna know about the game and whether I wanna buy it and play it or not.

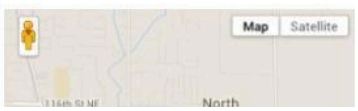
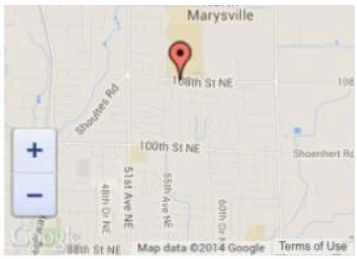
When will it end

Two students are dead after one of them opened fire Friday morning in the



Marysville-Pilchuck High School cafeteria before turning the gun on himself, according to law-enforcement sources.



Police said four other people were wounded in the 10:45 a.m. shooting.

Austin Joyner, a student at the school, said on Twitter that he saw the shooter come into the cafeteria, walk over to a table, pull out a gun and shoot students who were sitting there.

Jarron Webb, 15, said the shooter was angry at a girl who would not date him, and that the girl was one of the people shot. He said he believes one of the victims was his friend since kindergarten.

Key paragraph of IGN statement: basically they aren't journalists, and let others do their job for them.

> The argument against covering harassment is that it plays into the hands of the aggressors, who measure their payoff by the disruptions they cause. It is the same reasoning that keeps IGN from covering bomb threats, or from mentioning the names of killers when the mainstream media attempts to link real world violence with video games. The intimidation and threats hardly need a signal boost from IGN at this point, having been reported by the New York Times, CNN, and Rolling Stone. Many at IGN feel additional visibility only encourages those who want to use the Movement as a means to stop rather than start discussions.

Watching the news about a school shooting today in Seattle and honestly I'm sorta shaking with fear and with rage.

If GG is mad about censorship they'll surely be quite peeved about Wal-Mart and Best Buy dictating to publishers acceptable game content.

gamergaters 10/20/14 (Mon) 20:25:29 ID: 0f368d No.5 [Reply] [Watch Thread]
First thread I want to make here:
We need to get some positive media of our own out there, and the right-wing media has, so far, been on our side through this whole thing, via people like Milo, IA, etc.
We also need to start hitting back at the social justice movement in the courts. We have evidence of illegal activities, let's fucking use it.
Finally, we need to drop the pretense that this movement is some inclusive hugbox that needs to bend over backwards for trannies, "minorities", etc. If they don't agree with the core values of gamergate, then fuck them. We should not be trying to compromise to put on a 'good looking face' for people, we're a 'chan for fucks sake.
Here's some stuff to get us started:
I want to point out that Milo likely has contacts with people at fox news, talking to him about who to speak to at fox is something we shouldn't ignore
Milo - https://twitter.com/Nero (Don't know if he has an email available.)
